

ENG201 Idea Solution:

Q1. Good and famous writers just don't fall from sky rather acquire their art of good writing from this very world. Explain in detail how world teaches them to create writing master pieces by avoiding certain frequent writing lapses and problems. (05 marks)

Solution:

A writer has that special ability of noticing things which normal people don't and writes professionally about his feelings or experiences.

Things we find normal or ordinary may actually have some importance or beauty which only an artist generally notices.

Hence everywhere they go, every experience they have, all carry special meaning to them or have something which catches their eyes and hence they pen it down in their own unique style according to their potential.

All these things happen as they travel around, meet people or do new things and Skilled writers are able to use language to portray ideas and images from their imagination.

The highs-lows, positives and negatives in the world often motivate the writer or give him ideas and thus writers easily avoid certain frequent writing lapses and problems because they write about their feelings about the environment or the world they live in and thoughts derived from them.

A writer generally does not write lies but writes from his heart about his feelings toward the topic and thus does not generally face the problem of facing writing lapses.
